

Scientific Writer: Join a dynamic scientific group of faculty and fellows in our Center for Cardiovascular Regeneration at the Houston Methodist Research Institute. As our scientific writer, you will attend our journal clubs and seminars, our laboratory working group meetings, and other educational activities within the Texas Medical Center, the largest medical center in the world. These educational experiences and the scientific exchanges with our faculty and fellows will provide the grist for great grants which you will help us to generate. In addition, you will assist with our scientific and lay communications, and have the opportunity to co-author scientific papers and reviews. A PhD in biological sciences is required. Experience in grant writing is preferred. For more information, contact John P. Cooke MD PhD, Chair of the Department of Cardiovascular Sciences, Houston Methodist Research Institute, jpcooke@tmhs.org