

Malignant Hematopoiesis - Assistant, Associate or Full Professors: Cincinnati, OH, United States

The Hematologic Malignancies Program of the Cancer and Blood Disease Institute at the Cincinnati Children's Research Medical Center invites applications for tenure-track faculty positions at the rank of Assistant, Associate, or Full Professor. The mission of the Hematologic Malignancies Program is to pursue multi-disciplinary, synergistic, and highly collaborative research dedicated to normal and malignant hematopoiesis. The program is built upon a foundation of extraordinary institutional strengths in basic and translational clinical research at Cincinnati Children's Research Foundation and at the University Of Cincinnati College Of Medicine.

We welcome investigators with an interest at the interface between normal and malignant hematopoiesis. Ideal candidates will implement innovative approaches and novel paradigms to study the basic biology and mechanisms, disease modeling, and/or translational aspects of stem cell biology and hematologic malignancies. Cincinnati Children's Research Foundation offers an outstanding start-up package, a competitive salary, and excellent benefits.

Cincinnati Children's Research Foundation is a collaborative and internationally renowned research and educational institute within Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center, the nation's top pediatric cancer program. The research institute consists of over 300 independent research laboratories supported by over $200M in grants.
